Unwarranted iefenbaker

By ALEX YOUNG Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The opposition today defeated the government on a vote of 122 to 104 as a result of a procedural wrangle arising out of the U.S. government's criticism of Diefenbaker government's nuclear policy.

It was the first defeat of the minority Diefenbaker government forces and seemed likely to bring about an early election. There was no immediate indication as to whether the government might resign in the face of the defeat. By winning its vote, the opposition immediately plunged the Commons into an emergency debate on what the prime minister earlier condemned as "unwarranted intrusion in Canadian affairs" by the U.S. government

Before the vote, H. A. Olson (SC—Medicine Hat) said that cabinet ministers had told his party that Prime Minister Diefenbaker would dissolve Parliament found the atmosphere created ter Harkness today described if the Commons forced the debate. However, Veterans Minister Churchill, government

Moment of Truth

AT THE WORST POSSIBLE time the Government of Canada has involved itself in a quarrel with the Government of the United States. The extraordinary, almost unprecedented document issued by the American State Department last night in effect accuses Mr. Diefenbaker of misrepresenting the facts of continental defence and in the restrained language of diplomacy, indicates that Canada is not adequately fulfilling its responsibilities,

These are extremely serious statements coming from a friendly nation which provides Canada's sole defence. They seem to deny at several specific points the statements made by Mr. Diefenbaker in Parliament a few days ago.

The Canadian Government will be tempted to protect itself by denouncing foreign interference in Canadian affairs but what the nation needs now is the truth. At this writing Mr. Diefenbaker has made no reply to the State Department. It is to be hoped that he will speak in Parliament before the day is out.

If he continues to straddle the nuclear issue which lies at the root of this dispute an international argument will remain disruptive but ambiguous. The Prime Minister should give us the facts as he sees them without a moment's delay.

Meanwhile both the Canadian and American people are completely bewildered by the obvious lack of any clear Canadian defence policy.

When Mr. Diefenbaker made his statement about defence on Janstatement about defence on samuary 25, the reliable, non-partisan Canadian Press summarized it as follows: "However, at no point in his two-hour speech did Mr. Diefenbaker say definitely whether Canada has rejected or accepted a nuclear role for Canadian forces."

Mr. Harkness insists, however, that the fine print of the speecha few obscure paragraphs—defi-nitely mean that Canada will accept nuclear weapons not long hence. Thus he denies the meaning of Mr. Diefenbaker's statement as under-stood by virtually the whole press gallery of Ottawa and by the House of Commons also.

It is true that Mr. Diefenbaker, according to the Canadian Press, admitted that the government had undertaken to equip Canada's European air division with strike-reconnaissance planes "including the mission of delivering nuclear weapons."

He added: "The fact that a mistake may have been made, or may not have been made, should not be a basis for the continuation of a policy just because to admit it would be wrong."

Mr. Diefenbaker explained that Canada would secure the views of its allies "and on the basis of that will be in a position to me decision, a consistent decision, first to maintain our undertakings secondly to execute, if that be the view, the maintenance of our collective defence."

Again, he emphasized that "we do not want to do anything at this time to rock the boat" and said he would not be "stampeded" and would not "act on the impulse of the moment."

In ordinary English what could FROM OTTAWA this mean except that the government would not make a decision on nuclear arms until, as Mr. Diefenbaker said, the NATO Council met in late May?

Mr. Harkness says, however, that a decision already has been made, and it would appear that he is trying to drive the government into a confirmation of that decision. None has come from Mr. Diefen-baker who says that Mr. Harkness was not making an interpretation at all, but merely quoting some parts of the original statement.

Where does all this leave us? It leaves us with a nuclear policy which Parliament, the nation and the press obviously cannot under-And it leaves the breach between Mr. Harkness, who favors nuclear weapons and Mr. Green, who opposes him, clearer than ever.

The sincerity of these gentlemen, both ornaments to our politics, cannot be doubted but still there is no comprehensible policy and there may be none before an ection if it is called soon.

The policy of the Liberal Party, on the other hand, is perfectly clear. Mr. Pearson promises, if elected, to accept nuclear weapons immediately and thus to fulfill the nation's solemn commitment to its allies. After that, however, he would explore the desirability of switching Canada's role to conventiona weapons, by agreement with NATO.

Many people will approve Mr. Pearson's policy. Many will oppose But at least everybody understand it and vote accordingly. As things stand at the moment a citizen voting for the Diefenbaker government cannot know what he or she is voting for.

The Oil, Chemical and Atomic

Workers carried their opposition to the bill to the British Columbia Supreme Court and lost. They lost again in Court of Appeal. Now they take the issue to the highest court in the land, as is their right. But a somewhat surprising de-velopment has occurred. The attorney-general of Saskatchewan has, through the avenue of a little-used rule of the Supreme Court, entered the case in support of the union. A cabinet member of the Saskatche-wan government thus intervenes in an issue between a local in British Columbia and the government of this province. The procedure is of course.

This is playing the most obvious kind of politics. Saskatchewan, which alone has an NDP government, finds it necessary to curry favor with the unions. The government of the prairie province naturally wants to see annulled a bill which blocks union contributions to the party's war chest. As the Regina Leader-Post interprets the new development, the attorney general "has embarked the government of Saskatchewan upon a policy to use the money of taxpayers to support the CCF-NDP

The Non-Nuclear Nuclear Policy Denied? THE prime minister's speech of Friday was the highlight of the debate on foreign affairs and national defence. It was also a masterpiece of confusion This may sound paradoxical. The explana-tion is that Mr. Diefenbaker hinted at a good deal while committing himself to almost nothing. Anyone who seeks to interpret the defence policy of this country must devote himself like the Western.

Conservatives in their recent convention, to prime ministerial mind-reading.
It is apparent, if one looks at the debate as a whole, that Thursday was merely an introduction to the more important exchanges of Friday afternoon, Mr. Green launched but, because of throat trouble, did not finish a long speech on foreign affairs. This was in reality a build-up for Mri Diefenbaker's reply to the Pearson attack on the following day. Mr. Green's role evidently and the state of t was to emphasize Canada's part in dis armament negotiations and to suggest that a swiftly changing world is whirling into a new and more hopeful era.

Highly Critical

Mr. Pearson, in a wide ranging speech, set forth the defence policy of his own party and accused the government of refusing to face up to its com-mitments. The Liberals had been highly critical of the nuclear role accepted by the government. They would have preferred to renegotiate our commitments to NATO and NORAD.

But when they took this position, the government still had room to manoeuvre because delivery of the weapons requir-ing nuclear warheads for maximum efficiency was still some two years away. With the installations in place and aircraft being delivered the matter is very different. If Canada fails now to honor her commitments, there will be a serious gap in defence arrangements which no one else is in a position to fill. A Liberal government would, therehonor the commitments en future negotiations with our allies a more appropriate defence role for Can-

Mr. Diefenbaker, rising to reply, commended the example of the mother of parliaments where discussions are "incisive, direct and without unnecessary Unfortunately he did not verbiage." follow that example and it is therefore impossible to state with any precision the policy which he defended.

According to the prime minister, Canada has not repudiated her undertakings and will not renege on her responsibili-ties. Does this mean that the government will accept nuclear warheads for our various weapons? Not necessarily.

So far as the Bomarc is concerned, Mr. Diefenbaker's case apparently is that this weapon has become obsolete. It was never intended for the defence of Canada but to preserve the American from missiles,

The government some years ago made its judgment according to its best lights but the world since then has changed. If we have lost our investment, other countries have lost vastly more. It is curious that the RCAF still considers the Bomarc a "first class" weapon. It is still more curious to read the defence of the Bomarcs offered in March 1960 by Mr. Pearkes.

He said (Hansard P 2513) that: "Our two Canadian Bomarcs, when established at North Bay and La Macaza, will give coverage from approximately Sault Ste.
Marie to Quebec." According to the plans of that time, other Canadian cities including Halifax and Winnipeg were to be protected by American Bomarcs.

As the prime minister could find nothing good to say of the Bomarcs, it seems reasonable to conclude that they have no future except perhaps as a tourist attraction. But this may be wrong.
In the matter of our NATO Starfight ers and Honest Johns, Mr. Diefenbaker's thought was completely opaque. His message appeared to be that reat changes were taking place in NATO defence policy. "We are living in a new and changing world of defence in a new and changing world of defence realism." There is to be a meeting of NATO nations in Ottawa late in May and at that time, in co-operation with our allies, the government will "undertake a clarification of our role in NATO defence plans and dispositions."

strategic air command against bomber attack. There is now a "phasing out" of takes may have been made and said the bomber threat and the danger is that it would be wrong to persist in them. "Delivery of the F-104G has commenced but the strike reconnaissance role has been placed under doubt by the recent Nassau declaration concerning nuclear arms, as well as other develop-ments both technical and political in the defence field."

> There was a good deal about Nassau in the prime minister's speech but its relevance was mysterious. Mr. Diefen-baker emphasized the new reliance on Polaris which, of course, is a strategic weapon and he attached great importance to the reference in the com-munique to the development of a multilateral nuclear force. Later in the speech he asserted that "if that concept at Nas sau is carried into effect, much of our planning in the past will pass out of existence." Again, he said: "If there is going to be set up a multilateral nuclear in a fat pocketbook. force, then all our planning to date, or most of it, will be of little or no con-

Or do we want to save human life by making it as risky as possible for irresponsible drivers to ignore the laws which are set down to increase safety?

Certainly the law-abiding driver has nothing to fear. He follows the regula-tions and he invites no punishment. Is he, among others, to be victimized by the driver who does the opposite?

Because George Drew lost two elections and John Die-fenbaker won a narrow and indecisive victory in 1957, George Drew has been popularly regarded as a leader who lacked the qualities needed to win, while John Diefenbaker, despite over 20 years of defeats and frustrations before 1956, was regarded, until last June, as a heaven sent winner.

Yet nothing that did not happen is surer than that George Drew would have defeated Mackenzie King in 1949 if Mackenzie King had stayed on as leader of the Liberal Party and prime

What is almost as sure is that George Drew could have defeated the St. Laurent government in 1956, after the pipeline debaje if there had been an election at that time. Most people do not realize that George Drew had it in his power to force an election at that time and that some members of the Liberal government believed they would have lost that election.

Looking back today, it is easy to see that George Drew's defeats in 1949 and 1953 were due far less to poor leadership on his part than to the fact that the new Liberal leader, Louis St. Laurent, attractéd public sympathy and support in a fashion that no other leader, except possibly Laurier, had ever done before.

The simultaneous arrival as political

IN POLITICS nothing succeeds like leaders of Louis St. Laurent and George prew marked a major shift on the national political scene and, in the fall of 1948 and the spring of 1949, the shift seemed to favor the Conservative Party and George Drew. The new Tory leader, fresh from his third electoral victory in Ortario, was obviously looking for a Ordario, was obviously looking for a new world to conquer and he certainly looked like the only potential conqueror in any national party.

The Liberal government, in its 13th year of office, looked like a pushover at the next election. A foreign exchange crisis had forced the government to adopt an austerity program that irked many Canadians. The CCF appeared many Canadians. The CCF appeared to be replacing the Liberals as the second party in Ontario. The Opposition did not, in fact, succeed in defeating the pipeline bill, though they did prevent the government from meeting its original deadline. But what, politically, was far more significant, they created a popular impression that they were fighting for the rig of the people against a ruthless and dictatorial government that had even gone the length of stifling freedom of debate and of destroying the independence of the Speaker to gain its ends.

The battle over the pipeline culminated in George Drew's motion of want of confidence in the Speaker which he presented with a dignity and moderation which went a long way to remove any partisan appearance such a motion might, otherwise have had for the public.

OTTAWA - When historians review the ars and affairs of John Diefenbaker with the dispassionate perspective of detachment in time, perhaps they will marvel at what to me appears to be the biblical quality of

It takes faith to believe a great deal of hat is in the Bible, It's like that with Mr.

Diefenbaker, too. But much as Mr. Diefenbaker sounds like a parson when sonorous phrases surge from him, the art or science of government is not a religion. It is not founded on the acceptance, through faith, of great postulates as immutable truths. It is founded on facts, and logic. A political leader may engender great public faith in his leadership, as Mr. Diefenbaker did in 1958. But such lesser order of faith cannot both long and widely survive the pyramiding of evidence, of facts and logic, that denies the political postulates.

Abraham Lincolns an American who in past has been held in high regard by Mr. Diefenbaker, expressed this thought when he said that You can fool all the people some of the time and some of the ople all the time, but you can't fool all the people all of the time.

Take the question of national defence, on which the prime minister spoke with great eloquence in Parliament last week. "We have taken effective steps for the protection of this country," he asserted.

But the principal weaponry of defence, the jet fighters, the anti-aircraft missiles and the army's artillery rockets, have not been equipped with the nuclear explosive charges they need.

It takes great faith to believe that an Honest John rocket with a sand-filled war-head, or a Bomarc missile with no warhead at all, are "effective steps for the protection of this country."

It also stretches credulity to believe the. government has any intention of acquiring nuclear warheads, in view of "the clarifica-tion of our role" Diefenbaker will seek at the May meeting of the NATO council, and his report that after three months of forcible negotiations with the U.S. there is still no agreement on warheads for Bomarcs and Voodoo jets in Canada,

Those of us who criticize the government for having undertaken nuclear defence roles in NORAD and NATO only to refuse to carry out those undertakings, are perhaps guilty of a rational, logical approach. Not

We draw our conclusion from the govern ment's formal acceptance of a NATO nuclear role in 1959, and its implied acceptance of a nuclear NORAD role by its acceptance of nuclear weaponry for continental defence. We think it illogical that $700 millions worth of weaponry should be rendered minimally

But the prime minister has now re assured us that "any suggestion that we have repudiated our undertakings is false. Canada does not, has not, and will not renege on her responsibilities."

A breath or two later, the PM also reassured those who want Canada to continue to reject nuclear weapons. "We will do nothing to expand the nuclear family," he

And Defence Minister Harkness, who strangely took no part in the defence debate, made a statement outside the Common which reassures those concerned over the waste of nearly three-quarters billion defence dollars. Any suggestion that the government will junk all its new weaponry, Harkness said, is "completely incor

WASHINGTON (UPI)-As anyone who watches old movies on television can tell you, the badge of the newspaper business is a trench coat.

Not just any trench coat, of course. It needs to be a dirty old trench coat with a few holes in it, preferably bullet holes.

A trench coat is not really broken in until its wearer has covered a E-mers couple of revolutions, ex-posed a spy ring under the very nose of the FBI and solved an old kidnap case, thus freeing an innocent man from prison.

The coat must have a collar that can be turned up while a reporter is waiting on a fog-shrouded bridge for a rendezvous with a mysterious lady in black.

And it must have a belt that he can use to lower himself from a balcony when he is foiling an assassination plot against the prime minister of a small but strategic country in the Balkans Some women do not understand this. My wife, for instance, noting that my trench coat was looking a bit raunchy, sprang to the conclusion that it was merely worn out. She did not realize that a trench coat, wine and cheese, mellows with age, gradually acquiring a sort of patina, or crust, that gives it a distinctive color and

It was her lack of appreciation on this point that drew my attention to an alarming situation. The trench coat, like the bison and the whooping crane, is in danger of becoming extinct.

I learned of this recently when my wife revealed that she had intended to buy me a new trench coat for Christmas but had been unable to find one at any of the stores in

At first, I thought nothing of it, putting it down as merely additional evidence of the provincialism of suburban merchants. But was unable to dismiss it entirely from my Finally, I made a tour of some of the entown stores to investigate the matter first hand. It tended to confirm my fears, Trench coats have virtually disappeared from the racks.

"I haven't seen a coat like that in 12 years," one clothier told me when I described the garment I was seeking.

What the stores now mainly stock are single-breasted coats with narrow collars and lapels, sans belts and epaulets. I tried one on and it changed my image completely. Made me look like a second echelon bureau crat, for Pete's sake.

Unless something is done to preserve our identities, we newspapermen may have to go back to wearing press cards in our hats.

"Pacific Coast Junior Hockey League playoffs start Feb. 16. First-place New Westminster plays third-place Victoria in one semifinal; second-place Nanaimo meets last-place Esquimalt in the other best-of-five series."—News item.

Your operator has been waiting breathlessly this week a despatch from the American Baseball League. It would read:

"President Joseph Cronin announced today a new playoff system in the American League, effective at the end of the 1963 season.

"Instead of declaring the winner to be the team with the most wins and fewest defeats, a unique playoff system has been devised. The 9th and 10th place teams (probably Washington and Kansas City) will meet in a best-of-three series. The winner will play a best-of-five series with the winner of a best of seven series between the 7th and 8th place teams.

Merry Christmas!—And Batter Up!

this thing has more twists than a belly dancer) meets the winner of a best of nine series between the 5th and 6th

"This process will continue until only two teams (possibly New York Yankees and Washington Senators) are left. They will play a best-of-15 series to determine the AL representative in the World Series which should start just before Christinas Day, weather permitting."

The mail from Mr. Cronin's office has been late in arriving. But it will. After all, a precedent for his action took place this very week in Victoria.

You must have seen it, Cynthia. The notice I mean, that all four teams in the Pacific Coast Junior Hockey League would shortly engage in a playoff to determine the Most filberts would have thought that since last September the juniors were striving to prove which is the best team. Nonsense, Just because New Westminster Royals are 39 points ahead of Esquimalt doesn't mean a thing. In the Pacific Coast Junior League, as in the Bible, "all men are equals," etc. Especially at playoff time.

Don't Challenge the Muscular Maids

Such has not been the case so far. The Esquimalt team which must rank as the most docile group ever to bear the name Bruins has an amazing record.

They have managed to withstand the joys of victory in 25 out of 28 games. Defensively they have been kind to opposing forwards, giving up an average of 9.5 goals

Some sources insist Esquimalt could beat the pants off the Ladies' Bloomer League All Stars. But this is probably untrue. There are some pretty muscular maids n bloomers.

At the other end of the line are New Westminster Royals. They are big and bold, swift and sure, well-toached and well-behaved—they even say "sir" before assaulting a referee. The Royals are a polyglot of four teams drawn a referee. The Royais are a polygiot of four teams drawn from a Lower Mainland population of 5,0,000. Despite their virtues they are also $1,400 in the glue.

Somebody had to be responsible for the PCJHL all-team playoff idea, this masterpiece of concise thinking.

Could it be Ivan Temple, the league czar?

Not I' Not I' trilled Sir Ivan.

'C'mon Dave, You Deserve Some Pie'

Further sleuthing turned up the information that the fait d'accompli was the handiwork of the four team managers.
They reached their decision to include the whole league family in the playoffs BEFORE the season. Such erudition should not be cloaked in anonymity. The bows belong to Joseph Iannarelli, Esquimalt; Hector McNeil, Victoria: Bob Fenton, New Westminster; and, Frank Crane, Nanaimo.

If their idea eatches on, there is no telling where the trend will end.

At the next provincial election, for instance, consider this conversation in the riding of Kelowna where W. Bennett has defeated D. Fulton at the polls.

Bennett: "Look, Dave, we fought a nice messy fight and I won. But a lot of nuts—er, voters—liked you so why don't you come to Victoria with me and take part Fulton: "Cece, Cece old boy (tears welling in his eyes) you're all heart. Confused, maybe. Mixed-up, perhaps. But all heart.

"By the way, when do the playoffs start—I mean when does the legislature sit?"

Francis is scheduled to go against former provincial champion Tommy Black in a welterweight scrap that will headline a 10-bout show at the Fraser Street Hall, just off Esquimalt

Navy's former Atlantic Coast king, PO Dusty Gordon, is slated to step in for the semi-main event — a light-welter battle against Cpi. Bernard Patterson, PPCLL

CURLERS CORNER

By Ernie Fedoruk

Pacific Coasi curlers have put in almost two full seasons of play since they parted from the B.C. Curling Association and formed a second governing body within the provincial boundaries. The first few discordant notes come waiting through the service door this week.

This is not meant to revive the old argument between factions who favor the two-association system with those who lean towards one governing body in B.C.

Dissension has struck and the tew curlers who care about such things are interested in seeing how the Pacific Coast Association executive will react.

Coast Association executive will react.

The PCCA is an infant organization and growing pains.

must be expected. A minor pain can be tolerated now and then. However, if no attempt is made to supply a into something contagious and harmful.

The PCCA has been taken to task by some on two counts. Orie chastizes the executive for permitting last weekend's Coast championships to be staged under conditions that were, at best, deplorable. Another criticizes the six-rink playoff system and tries to promote a series involving eight teams.

Start With Letter of Apology . . .

. The first problem—conditions encountered at the Coast finals at Burnaby—appears to be an easy one to solve. The second is loaded, one which could precipitate interesting

According to qualified informants, these are some of the conditions that the six rinks had to bear in Burnaby:

1. The permitting of a ladies "shorty" 'spiel and an assortment of "pickup" games on sheets adjoining the ice used by the playoff contenders.

2. Allowing hockey games in the hockey rink (separted from the curling section by only a board fence and a

2. Allowing hockey games in the hockey rink (separted from the curling section by only a board fence and a chicken-wire barrier) and, subsequently, the raucous din of bells, whistles and screams of uncontrolled youngsters watching the hockey matches.

3. The awarding of ice under a system that must have been borrowed from the realm of the ridiculous. For example: The Victoria rink skipped by Don Moss played three games. All three were on sheet No. 3. Had Moss and his mates progressed further, they would have played two more games on the same sheet of ice!

These points, as mentioned earlier, make up the problem that can be solved easiest. A letter of apology from the PCCA executive to each of the six rinks that participated would be a start.

would be a start.

Make It Definite—Never Again!

In addition the PCCA should see to it that a Coast final will never again be staged in Burnaby—or in any rink that might offer similar conditions—unless participants are assured of a reception befitting the importance of the event.

That leaves us with the problem of an eight-rink or six-rink playoff. The six rinks which participated in the event this year came from three zones—Island, Vancouver

Following this year's championships, it was surprising to learn how many curiers suddenly are in favor of the eight-rink playoff. This would involve two rinks from each of the three zones and, in addition, two selected from a PCCA bonsplel.

This is the "back-door" entry that some of these same

This is the back-door entry that some of these same curlers fought against when all of B.C. was ruled by the one body (BCCA). Even some members of the PCCA executive have made an "about face" on the matter.

The problem will be thrown at the PCCA before long. It will be interesting to see how they handle it.

LOOSE STRAWS: A full complement of 64 rinks will start in Victoria Curling Club's annual bonspiel, which starts next Wednesday. The limit was reached last week and since then the names of six rinks were accepted as standbys. These will make the grade in case anyone decides to drop out. Of the 64, 16 rinks are from out of town. . . . The list includes two all-brother quartets—the Gregorys of Chilliwack and the Laws. . . The opening draw was made Wednesday night and will be published drawn 42 entries, far exceeding the fondest hopes of president Joyce Aylward and her committee... Victoria seniors were quite insistent that they be allowed to run their own show in conjunction with next week's bonspiel.... Seems there's more work to a bonspiel than they figured. ... Entries lagged and, to top it off, the prizes weren't pur-chased until recently.... Needless to say, the regular 'spiel committee is, uh, "lending a hand" now...

We see the car we had before this new car on occasion. Although it's been hot-rodded, it still carries vestigial traces of the faithful friend that transported on our errands for half a dozen years.

What we remember mostly about that car is the way we bought it. Ailing for months, its predecessor gave up the ghost at a highly inopportune moment. went on by taxi: I waited in a fender-kicking mood till a mechanic arrived to return me to a state of doubtful

"Mister," the mechanic "better face it. You need a new car."

So we churned on downtown, Ron and I; and with our noses against a showroom window, picked the eac we liked. Then we went in, pointed, and told the sales-"We'll take that one."

About 90 minutes later, we arrived with glittering chrome and snowy whitewalls at the house where Win and Pony were visiting

Our first new car — mine, technically, since we were yet unmarried-was a tough thirdhand Model A with a touchy carburetor and h a r d springs highways less smooth than those we now ride. It was easy on gas, an endearing quality in those depression days, and served us with a gruff and crossgrained honengagement ring.

For a number of years thereafter, we went carless. Then, with two small children to lug on and off To-ronto trolley buses, I sold a serial and we went car shop-

The one we found was secondhand, but in that immediate postwar year, cost us more than an unobtainable new one would have. It materialized in a violent back-east thunder and lightning storm. Until the sluicing rain abated, we sat admiring it through our windows while the previous owner gave us detailed instructions as to its care and feeding.

He loved that car . . a male mystique transferred from the days when a man's horse was his pal . . , and our pleasure was tinctured by his sadness at bidding his pet goodbye.

Some of his fondness rubbed off on us. Even though its treacherous over-drive nearly brought us to disaster on a mile-long hill above Maine's Kennebec River, and its weak front end played hob with tires. affection for it never flagged.

It transported us down to Nova Scotia and across the broad land to Seattle. We rolled it off a princess ship to Victoria where, repainted and with heavy-dury Saan-ich springs, it ended its days.

That car, I think we'll recall always with a special warmth. We'll reme even when the children are own and flitted, and we're off to new ventures in the ar they don't like to hear about, the fire-engine red. push-button, rag-top dreamboat from here to there long!

A mass of cold Arctic air, lying over the lower mainland and Island at a high altitude, is discharging drizzles of rain which freezes on hitting the ground Overnight, there were traces of snow in Greater

Victoria areas, and two to three inches up-Island, but it was the rain which caused the most inconvenience. Fenders were dented and cars ditched or up on sidewalks all over the area, but extreme caution on the part of most drivers prevented serious accidents.

Relief is in sight, according to the official weather forecast, which calls for a low of 32 degrees or slightly der tonight, moderating to the mid or high thirties Friday. In what weatherman Bill Mackie calls a "continuing struggle," mild, moist air is moving up from the United States, pressing under the mass of cold air lying over B.C.

He expects the moist air to prevail, bringing rain along in more moderate temperatures Friday.

DEAR ABBY . . .

It's Proper!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am being married for the second time. The wedding will take place in the minister's study with only a few guests present. I would like to wear a white cocktail suit. I have been told by several of my friends that I should not wear white because white stands for maidenhood. Of course I wouldn't wear a veil, I'd like your opinion.

DEAR ABBY: Do all wives make themselves out to be housekeeping marryrs, or is my your opinion.

Candlelight and poinsettias set the scene in Esquimalt United Church when Normal making their home at 405 Jean Spurrier exchanged vows with Joseph Roland Denis Proulx. Rev. Howard Turpin officiated at the double-ring

Parents of the principals are Staff Sgt. Duane G. Spurrier and Mrs. Spurrier, Mrs. L. Proulx, St. Boniface, Man., and the late Mr. Proulx.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floorlength white gown that had a fitted lace bodice tapering to points at the waistline and styled with a scalloped neckline and lily-point sleeves. Skirt was fashioned of net over taffeta. Four-layered el-bow-length veil misted from a coronet of pearls and sequins. White streamers edged the bouquet of deep red roses and silvered holly leaves.

THREE ATTENDANTS

Miss Heather Parker was maid of honor in a pale yellow taffeta gown while gowns of bridesmaids, the Misses Lynne Sisterson and Marilyn Bates were lilac and pale blue re-spectively. All had matching headpieces and carried pink carnation bouquets.

'Rum Show' by Navy As Brands Switched

OTTAWA (CP) - Tippling note from the public accounts: The navy spent $127,679 for rum in the 1961-62 fiscal year compared with $118,170 in the previous year.

The navy also changed its brand of rum, switching its total purchase to Lamb's Rum Company Limited, Montreal, from Captain Morgan Rum-Distillers Limited, Lasalle,

Such a switch is not made frivolously. A five-man testing panel in the defence department's chemicals inspection branch puts, rum samples submitted by distillers through rigorous The tasting board used to be all-civilian when the tests were begun in 1959. But the navy insisted on representa-tion, which it now has.

The tasting process is strictly a dry run, though. The taster may only roll the rum around on his tongue and then spit it out, sipping water and nibbling on soda biscuits between his exertions. And the tasting bee lasts only a couple of days because the navy buys its rum in bulk once a year.

There are no full-time tasters. Volunteers taste and sniff the bouquet for only 15 or 20 minutes and then return to their regular work.

Swallow Pride on College, MLA's Advice to Victoria

Victoria should swallow local pride and not claim full universities then?" asked Education Minister Leslie Peterson.

Party MLA Gordon Dowding said the students of Victoria and the favored the recommendation of the Macdonald report on higher education that Victoria College become an independent degree granting branch of the University of B.C.

It should be called either the University of B.C.

It should be called either the University of B.C. of Victoria or retain the name of Victoria or retain the university.

Our new car, the brisk little hardtop we bought in ... 59, has now in actual fact reached middle age, but we'll continue to call it "the new car" till it starts to disintegrate from very weariness and we acquire a new, new car.

The advantages of trading in every couple of years have been explained to me with vigor and eloquence by the automotive industry. But they don't make allowance for sentiment, those people. They fail to understand how a car hecomes a repository for memory which a fam-ily holds dear.

W. can look at it, for instance, and remember the day I plunged us into a oneway street in Portland, there to be sheltered from head-on traffic by an amiable truck driver until we managed to turn around on the patio of a dog and cat hospital.

Or the time a loose fitting permitted the master cylinder to drain itself dry, so that we rolled brakeless through a red light at a busy

There are other occasions. Night runs that ended with dawn nap and a cramped waking in new country to pick wild strawberries from plants damp with dew. Rare times when we stood back after a family washing and waxing bee, and told each "That's how a car should look.

* * * We see the car we had before this new car on oc-casion. Although it's been hot-rodded, it still carries vestigial traces of the faith-ful friend that transported us on our errands for half a dozen years.

What we remember mostly about that car is the way we bought it. Ailing for months, its predecessor gave up the ghost at a highly inent on by taxi: I waited in a fender-kicking mood till a mechanic arrived to return me to a state of doubtful

"Mister," the mechanic rid, "better face it. You need a new car."

we churned on down town, Ron and I: and with our noses against a showroom window, picked the car we liked. Then we went in, pointed, and told the sales-man, "We'll take that one."

ere visiting.
"I see you've got a new ar," our host kaid when we were indoors

Win's foot jumped slightly, but she didn't change expres-

"Yes," she said. "We've needed one for a long time. Isn't it a nice color?" She did like it, too, even She did like it, too, even though the upholstery gave the impression of being favricated from reclaimed mouse fur. We used it hard and snared a twinge when we parted with it.

Our first new car — mine, technically, since we were yet unmarried—was a fough thirdhand Model A with a touchy carburetor and hard springs that reacted violently to highways less smooth than those we now ride. It was easy on gas, an endearing quality in those depression days, and served us with a gruff and crossgrained hop-esty till I sold it to buy an engagement ring.

For a number of years hereafter, we went carless. Then, with two small chil-dren to lug on and off Toronto trolley buses, I sold a serial and we went car shopondhand, but in that immediate postwar year, cost us more than an unobtainable new one would have. It materialized in a violent back-east thunder and lightning storm. Until the sluicing rain abated, we sat admiring it through our windows while the previous owner gave us detailed instructions as to its care and feeding.

It transported us down to Nova Scotia and across the broad land to Seattle. We rolled it off a princess ship to Victoria where, repainted and with heavy-duty Saanich springs, it ended its days.

That car, I think we'll recall always with a special warmth. We'll remember it even when the children are own and flitted, and we're off to new ventures in the car they don't like to hear about, the fire-engine red, push-button, rag-top dream-boat from here to there long!

It was the first defeat of the minority Diefenbaker government forces and seemed-likely to bring about an early election.

While the government has no obligation technically to resign over today's defeat, it appeared certain that the defeat would be at least the beginning of the end.

There was no immediate indication as to whether the government might resign in the face of the defeat.

By winning its vote, the opposition immediately plunged the Commons into an emergency debate on what the prime minister earlier condemned as "unwarranted intrusion in Canadian affairs" by the U.S. gov-OTTAWA - Defence Minis ernment.
